

A b o u t t h e A u t h o r s

MORTEN ENDER is the Sociology Program Director and Associate Professor of Sociology in the Department of Behavioral Sciences and Leadership at the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York, U.S.A. He is an award-winning teacher at both the University of Maryland and West Point. He is the editor of two recent books Military Brats and Other Global Nomads: Growing Up in Organization Families (Praeger Publications 2002) and Inequalities: Readings in Diversity and Social Life (with Betsy Lucal, Pearson Custom Publishing 2005). His most recent published research examines the uses and treatment of core sociological knowledge in the teaching of undergraduate sociology.

ULRICH VOM HAGEN is a research fellow at the Bundeswehr Institute for Social Research (SOWI), Germany. He holds an M.A. in Public Administration and is currently writing a dissertation on “Military Culture” in sociology at the Humboldt University of Berlin. He gives lectures in military sociology at the Humboldt University and at Potsdam University. His current research interests include concepts of moral leadership, civil-military relations, organizational theory, and aspects of transnational security policy within European integration.

PAUL HIGATE is Lecturer in Social Policy at the School for Policy Studies in the University of Bristol, UK. He held a Ministry of Defence Fellowship from 2001 to 2003 exploring the experiences of veterans over a period of 2 years after leaving the British armed forces. Currently, Paul is Principal Investigator on an Economic and Social Research Council grant to examine gendered relations between male peacekeepers and local men and women in three Peace Support Operations. Prior to embarking on an academic career, Paul served in the Royal Air Force for 8 years where he rose to the rank of Corporal.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

ANNE IRWIN teaches anthropology at the University of Calgary and the University of Victoria. She received BA and M.A. degrees in anthropology from the University of Calgary and a Ph.D. in social anthropology from the University of Manchester. A former reserve officer, she is a graduate of the Canadian Land Forces Command and Staff College. She has conducted field research with a Canadian infantry unit and is working on a book about the social organization of soldiering.

LJUBICA JELUSIC is a full professor of defense studies at the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. She teaches military sociology, polemology, peace studies and anthropology of war. She has a B.A. in International relations and a B.A. in Defense studies, a M.Sc. in Defense Science, and a Ph.D. in Political Sciences from the University of Ljubljana. She also teaches at the Senior Officers Course and General Staff Course of Slovenian Army. Her research topics are civil-military relations, peacekeeping, and human resource management in the military.

RENÉ MOELKER is Associate Professor of sociology at the Royal Netherlands Military Academy. He holds a Ph.D. from the Erasmus University Rotterdam. His work in military sociology concentrates on the sociology of military families, military technology, the military profession, the military sociology of Norbert Elias, military education, conflict in Chechnya, and media.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

IGOR V. OBRAZTSOV, Ph.D. (Sociology), served twenty-five years as a career officer (Colonel). He is Assistant Professor of Sociology in the Department of Military-Humanitarian Sciences of the Military Academy of the General Staff and Associate Professor of Sociology in the Department of Social Policy and Administration in Social Processes of the Academy of Labor and Social Relations. Areas of interest include historical and theoretical-methodological problems of military sociology in the world. His major publications include The Russian Army from Afghanistan up to Chechnya: A Sociological Analysis (Moscow 1997 in cooperation with S.Solov'yov) [Russian]; "Military Sociology," in The Sociological Encyclopedia (Moscow 2003) [Russian]; "The Study of Military and Society in Russia," in Callaghan and Kernic, Armed Forces and International Security: Global Trends and Issues (Muenster: LIT 2003).

ERIC OUELLET is Director of Academics at the Canadian Forces College and Head of the Department of Defence Studies at the Royal Military College of Canada. He teaches military sociology, leadership, and command. He has an undergraduate and Master's degree in political science from Université Laval (Quebec City) and a Ph.D. in sociology from York University (Toronto). He is presently researching the social construction of military facts and knowledge in digitized command centers.

FABIAN VIRCHOW lectures at the University of Applied Sciences Kiel (Germany). He studied sociology, political science, and social history at the University of Hamburg where he also graduated as a sociologist. As a project manager at the Technology Foundation of the state of Schleswig-Holstein he worked on the European level for several years (especially in the field of Information Societies) before returning to the academic field. He recently finished his Ph.D. in Political Science at the Free University of Berlin conducting research on the far right's concepts of foreign and military policy in Germany.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

CLAUDE WEBER is a professor and researcher at the French Military Academy St-Cyr in Coëtquidan, France, in the department of sociology. He teaches military sociology, intercultural relations, management in professional armies, military public communication. He has a Ph.D. in social sciences (ethnology) from the Marc Bloch University (Strasbourg, France). He is presently conducting research on joint warfare in French military operations.